ABSTRACT

This document consists of the U.S. Department of Education's current list of the approximately 95 accrediting agencies and associations in the United States recognized as reliable authorities concerning the quality of postsecondary education or training offered by institutions or programs. The introductory section points out that the United States has no centralized authority exercising national control over its educational institutions and that nongovernmental, peer evaluation of educational institutions and programs by private educational associations insures a basic level of quality. The full text of the federal regulations regarding the procedures and criteria for recognizing accrediting agencies is provided. The document includes a discussion of the functions of accreditation, the accrediting procedure, types of accreditation, and the role of nongovernmental coordinating agencies. Accrediting bodies are listed under the following categories: regional institutional accrediting associations; regional institutional accrediting commissions; national institutional and specialized accrediting bodies (by subject); and accrediting agencies and associations recognized for their preaccreditation categories. Usually provided in each listing is agency name; dates of original, most recent, and next regular review; director, address, and phone number. (CK)

Accreditation in the United States

The United States has no Federal ministry of education or other centralized authority exercising single national control over educational institutions in this country. The States assume varying degrees of control over education, but, in general, institutions of postsecondary education are permitted to operate with considerable independence and autonomy. As a consequence, American educational institutions can vary widely in the character and quality of their programs.

In order to insure a basic level of quality, the practice of accrediting arose in the United States as a means of conducting nongovernmental, peer evaluation of educational institutions and programs. Private educational associations of regional or national scope have adopted criteria reflecting the qualities of a sound educational program and have developed procedures for evaluating institutions or programs to determine whether or not they are operating at basic levels of quality.

Functions of Accreditation

1. Certifying that an institution has met established standards;
2. Assisting prospective students in identifying acceptable institutions;
3. Assisting institutions in determining the acceptability of transfer credits;
4. Helping to identify institutions and programs for the investment of public and private funds;
5. Protecting an institution against harmful internal and external pressure;
6. Creating goals for self-improvement of weaker programs and stimulating a general raising of standards among educational institutions;
7. Involving the faculty and staff comprehensively in institutional evaluation and planning;
8. Establishing criteria for professional certification, licensure, and for upgrading courses offering such preparation;
9. Providing one of several considerations used as a basis for determining eligibility for Federal assistance.

The Accrediting Procedure

1. Standards: The accrediting agency, in collaboration with educational institutions, establishes standards.
2. Self-study: The institution or program seeking accreditation prepares a self-evaluation study that measures its performance against the standards established by the accrediting agency.
3. On-site Evaluation: A team selected by the accrediting agency visits the institution or program to determine firsthand if the applicant meets the established standards.
4. Publication: Upon being satisfied that the applicant meets its standards, the accrediting agency lists the institution or program in an official publication with other similarly accredited institutions or programs.
5. Reevaluation: The accrediting agency periodically reevaluates the institutions or programs that it lists to ascertain that continuation of the accredited status is warranted.

Types of Accreditation

There are two basic types of educational accreditation, one identified as "institutional" and one referred to as "specialized"or "programmatic."

Institutional accreditation normally applies to an entire institution, indicating that each of its parts is contributing to the achievement of an institution's objectives, although not necessarily all on the same level of quality. The various commissions of the regional accrediting associations, for example, perform institutional accreditation, as do some national accrediting agencies.

Specialized accreditation normally applies to evaluation of programs, departments, or schools which usually are parts of a total collegiate or other postsecondary institution. The unit accredited may be as large as a college or school within a university or as small as a curriculum within a discipline. Most of the specialized accrediting agencies review units within a postsecondary institution which is accredited by one of the regional accrediting commissions. However, certain of the specialized accrediting agencies do accredit professional schools and other specialized or vocational or other postsecondary institutions which are free-standing in their operations. Thus, a "specialized" or "programmatic" accrediting agency may also function in the capacity of an "institutional" accrediting agency. In addition, a number of specialized accrediting agencies accredit educational programs within non-educational settings, such as hospitals.

Accreditation does not provide automatic acceptance by an institution of credit earned in another institution, nor does it give assurance of acceptance of graduates by employers. Acceptance of students or graduates is always the prerogative of the receiving institution or employer. For these reasons, besides ascertaining the accredited status of a school or program, students should take additional measures to determine, prior to enrollment, whether or not their educational goals will be met through attendance at a particular institution. These measures should include inquiries to institutions to which transfer might be desired or to prospective employers, and personal inspection of the institution in which enrollment is contemplated.

Nongovernmental Coordinating Agencies

The Council on Postsecondary Accreditation, in January 1975, assumed the functions of the Federation of Regional Accrediting Commissions of Higher Education and the National Commission on Accrediting. It is a nongovernmental organization intended to foster and facilitate the role of accrediting agencies in promoting and ensuring the quality and diversity to American postsecondary education. The Council recognizes, coordinates, and periodically reviews the work of its member accrediting agencies, determines the appropriateness of existing or proposed accrediting activities, and performs other related functions.

The Council of Regional School Accrediting Commissions serves as the coordinating agency for the seven commissions on secondary education of the regional associations. Its general purpose is to provide an organization through which the regional commissions for secondary schools can unite and communicate to advance the cause of voluntary institution-base evaluation and accreditation to public and nonpublic schools and for a diversity of other types of secondary schools.

National Recognition Of Accrediting Agencies and Associations By the U.S. Secretary of Education

The U.S. Secretary of Education is required by statute to publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies and associations which the Secretary determines to be reliable authorities as to the quality of training offered by educational institutions and programs.

Most institutions attain eligibility for Federal funds by holding accredited or preaccredited status with one of the accrediting bodies recognized by the Secretary of Education, in addition to fulfilling other eligibility requirements.

In some legislation, provision is made for special qualifying steps that may be takes as alternatives to the normal accreditation process.

The commissions of the regional associations and the national accrediting agencies which are recognized by the Secretary have no legal control over educational institutions or programs. They promulgate standards of quality or criteria of institutional excellence and approve or admit to membership those institutions that meet the standards or criteria.

The Accrediting Agency Evaluation Branch

The Accrediting Agency Evaluation Branch is established to deal with accreditation matters. Located in the Higher Education Management Services Directorate of the Office of Postsecondary Education, the Branch has the following major functions:

1. Continuous review of procedures, policies, and issues in the area of the Department of Education's interests and responsibilities relative to accreditation;
2. Administration of the process whereby accrediting associations secure initial and renewed recognition by the Secretary of Education;
3. Liaison with accrediting associations;
4. Consultative services to institutions, associations, other Federal agencies, and Congress regarding accreditation;
5. Interpretation and dissemination of policy relative to accreditation issues in the case of all appropriate programs administered by the Department of Education;
6. Conduct and stimulation of appropriate research; and
7. Support for the Secretary's National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility.

The National Advisory Committee On Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility

The National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility was established under the Education Amendments of 1980 (P.L. 96-374). It is composed of 15 persons appointed to three-year terms by the Secretary of Education from various segments of the secondary and postsecondary education community, the student/youth population, State departments of education, professional associations, and the general public.

Functions

The National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility advises the Secretary of Education, or designee, and the Assistant Secretary for Postsecondary Education.

The Committee shall, with respect to all matters pertaining to institutional eligibility:

1. Advise the Secretary with regard to the responsibility to publish a list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies and associations which the Secretary determines to be reliable authorities as to the quality of training offered, including advising the Secretary with respect to the criteria and procedures for carrying out such responsibility;

2. Advise the Secretary with regard to the responsibility to designate State agencies as reliable authorities on the quality of public postsecondary vocational education or training and on the quality of nursing education;

3. Develop and recommend to the Secretary standards and criteria for specific categories of vocational training institutions and institutions of higher education for which there are no recognized accrediting agencies, associations, or State agencies, in order to establish the eligibility of such institutions on an interim basis for participation in federally funded programs; and

4. Carry out such other advisory functions relating to accreditation and institutional eligibility as may be assigned by the Secretary.

(c) Determining that institutions or programs document the educational achievements of their students, including students admitted on the basis of ability to benefit, in verifiable and consistent ways, such as evaluation of senior theses, reviews of student portfolios, general educational assessments (e.g., standardized test results, graduate or professional school placements), job placement rates, licensing examination results, employer evaluations, and other recognized measures;

§ 602.18 Regard for adequate and accurate public disclosure.

The Secretary determines whether an accrediting agency, in making its decisions, shows regard for the decisions of States and of other recognized accrediting agencies by conforming with the following practices:

(a) Recognizing only those institutions or programs that are legally authorized under applicable State law to provide a program of education beyond secondary education.

(b) In considering whether to grant initial accreditation or preaccreditation status to an institution or program, taking into account actions by other recognized agencies which have denied accreditation or preaccreditation status to the institution or program, have placed the institution or program on public probationary status, or have revoked the accreditation or preaccreditation status or the institution or program.

(c) If another recognized agency places an institution or the principal program offered by an institution on public probationary status or revokes the accreditation of the institution or principal program within an institution, promptly reviewing the accreditation or preaccreditation status it has previously granted to that institution to determine if there is cause for it to withdraw or otherwise alter that status.

Accrediting Agencies and Associations Recognized for Their Preaccreditation Categories

Under the terms of the Higher Education Act and other Federal legislation providing funding assistance to postsecondary education, an institution or program is eligible to apply for participation in certain Federal programs if, in addition to meeting other statutory requirements, it is accredited by a nationally recognized accrediting agency or association - or if it is an institution with respect to which the U.S. Secretary of Education has determined that there is satisfactory assurance the institution pr program will meet the accreditation standards of such agency or association within a reasonable time. An institution or program may establish satisfactory assurance of accreditation by acquiring reaccreditation status with a nationally recognized agency or association which has been recognized by the U.S. Secretary of Education for the award of such status. According to the Criteria for Nationally Recognized Accrediting Agencies and Associations, if an accrediting agency or association has developed a preaccreditation status, it must demonstrate that it "applies criteria and follows procedures that are appropriately related to those used to award accreditation status."

THE RECOGNITION PROCESS

Petition Format

Accrediting agencies desiring to be listed by the Secretary of Education must petition for such listing, demonstrating their compliance with the Criteria for Secretarial Recognition (34 CFR Part 602). A petition for initial recognition or renewal of recognition should consist of a narrative statement, organized on a criterion-by-criterion basis, showing how the agency complies with the Criteria for Secretarial Recognition. The narrative statement should be accompanied by clearly referenced supportive documentation, including the agency's accreditation standards and procedures, a recent externally audited financial statement, published lists of accredited schools or programs, self-evaluation guidelines, guidance materials for visiting team members, and sample completed self-evaluations and site visit reports.

Submission

The petition plus three copies should be submitted to the Chief, Accrediting Agency Evaluation Branch (AAEB), at the address on the inside back cover of this brochure. Bulkier exhibit items, such as self-evaluations or team reports, need not be included with the four copies. To receive consideration, petitions must be submitted at least six months prior to the month in which they are scheduled for review.

Analysis

The petition review process conducted by the Department of Education includes analysis of the petition by professional staff of the Accrediting Agency Evaluation Branch and observation of the agency's or association's site visit and decision-making activities by AAEB staff. Staff members may also visit accrediting agency personnel and review the agency's facilities, records and administrative operations. AAEB may also conduct interviews or surveys of other persons, organizations or institutions concerning the applicant agency's accreditation process in order to obtain further information relating to how the agency complies with the Criteria for Secretarial Recognition.

The AAEB prepares a written analysis of the agency's petition. The staff analysis, reports of on-site observations, special survey reports, and other material pertinent to the analysis are included in the agenda material to be reviewed by the National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility. In advance of the National Advisory Committee meeting at which the petition is scheduled to be considered, the AAEB provides the written staff analysis and appendices to the applicant agency and to interested third parties.

Hearing

The National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility meets at least twice a year to review petitions from accrediting agencies. Usually, a petition is assigned to one of two subcommittees of the National Advisory Committee. Each subcommittee member is assigned to serve as an in-depth "reader" concerning one or more petitions. Each member of the Advisory Committee receives every staff analysis and appended materials.

A petitioning agency is invited to make an oral presentation, which is normally heard by the subcommittee to which the petition is assigned. The subcommittee also hears oral presentations from the AAEB and from third parties who request to be heard. Oral presentations concerning highly complex or controversial petitions usually are heard by the full Advisory Committee.

Each subcommittee of the National Advisory Committee reports its findings and recommendations to the full Advisory Committee, which adopts final recommendations to be forwarded to the Secretary. The Advisory Committee conducts its business in public. A transcript of the proceedings is taken.

Final Decision

The Secretary of Education makes the final decision regarding recognition or renewal of recognition of an accrediting agency. An agency may be granted initial recognition or renewal of recognition for a period of up to five years, depending upon its degree of compliance with the Criteria for Secretarial Recognition. The action will include a statement of the scope of the agency's recognized activities. The Secretary may also: 1) defer action concerning a petition for initial or renewal of recognition until further study of the petition is accomplished; 2) deny initial recognition; 3) withdraw recognition; or 4) limit recognition. In each of the last three cases, the Secretary will provide the agency the opportunity to show cause why that action should not be taken.

The Secretary's list of nationally recognized accrediting agencies is published periodically in the Federal Register, as well as in this brochure. The list includes the scope of recognition of each agency or association.

Extension of Scope

A petition for extension of scope of recognition may be included as an integral part of a petition for renewal of recognition - or it may be submitted separately. If extension of scope is sought prior to the agency's next regularly scheduled review, agency personnel should consult with the AAEB concerning the petition format.
